Progress Rating Tool

Use the Progress Rating Tool to assess where your community is on its journey to becoming an Early Learning Community and reaching each of the targets. For each level, assess your community’s progress on a scale of 1-5:

- 1 indicates you are just getting started, which may mean that completing this Progress Rating Tool is your very first step.
- 3 indicates that you are making progress and have taken action to achieve the target.
- 5 means you are well on your way, which may even mean that you feel you have achieved this level.

Support your assessment by checking off which actions your community has already taken at this level. If you have taken an action that isn’t listed, write it in. Then, select or write in action steps you can take to reach new levels, noting your plans in the column to the right. You can use the “notes” sections throughout the Progress Rating Tool to go into more detail on your current status. You can pull those “planned action steps” into your Action Plan in Appendix C.

As you complete the Progress Rating Tool, keep in mind the key considerations of this work: attention to equity, family partnerships and a focus on results.

- Are your efforts benefiting ALL children and families? Are some families, neighborhoods or population groups left out, underserved or disconnected from the rest of the community? Does your leadership group consistently check in on closing gaps in opportunity, access and outcomes? Are the voices of a diverse group of community members helping to inform the work?
- Are parents and families engaged as partners and leaders in improving their own communities? From service providers through the leadership of your early childhood system, are families seen as valuable partners and agents for change?
- Are the leaders of this work keeping an eye on the North Star, “All Children Thrive,” and assessing whether your efforts are improving outcomes? Are you consulting the data on a regular basis and adjusting your efforts when needed?
1.1 Local leaders work together across systems with a focus on early childhood.

Has the Community Reached This Level?

Completed
- Provide space at publicly owned buildings, such as recreation centers, libraries or school buildings, for providers to deliver services, host parent gatherings and address other community needs.
- Use public media, like the local open access channel, and other public assets to get the word out about early childhood development.
- Put tips for how parents can engage children in brain-building moments, inside utility bills, on the sides of buses and trash trucks, in public transportation stations and depots or on other city-owned vehicles.
- Survey or interview early care and education providers about the resources they have, challenges they face and the supports they could use as they work to improve quality. This could also be an opportunity to connect providers to community supports, services and their elected officials.
- Partner with school districts to assess how public education funds are being used and whether they can be used to support early childhood programming within schools and the surrounding neighborhoods.
- Engage city or local government departments that are funding programs for healthy and safe communities and strengthening families, such as crime prevention, family literacy or mentoring for school-age children and youth.

Other:

Level 2
Community and early childhood partners work together to identify points of intersection to use existing funds and resources creatively as well as to find new funding sources.

Has the Community Reached This Level?

Completed
- Consider what assets each partner has (financial and otherwise) and how they might be employed to further common goals. For example, when the school district is hosting trainings or conferences for pre-k teachers, community-based pre-k providers could be invited to attend. Parent leadership groups can be powerful allies to increase parent and family engagement in city or county level planning and initiatives.
- Learn from service providers about how they “blend and braid” funding to meet family needs, and explore whether there are ways to formalize those strategies or support other programs in making similar innovations.
- Use business development resources and tax incentives to help early care and education providers better manage the business side of their centers and improve quality.
- Consider the current needs of the early childhood system and develop an improvement or strategic plan.
- Engage the philanthropic and business community through public/private partnerships focused on specific issues or neighborhoods, or to fund programs, evaluation efforts or your Early Learning Community efforts in general.
- Provide technical assistance in a variety of areas, including organizing bulk buying groups and participation in the Child and Adult Care Food Program to provide subsidized meals to children in early care and education centers.
- Encourage providers to use a shared services model to reduce or share costs through joint purchasing, staff sharing or centralized administration to ease the administrative burden. Consider how local government could help administer this model.
- Partner with agencies and providers to write proposals and apply for grants. Use the opportunity to showcase what combined strengths and resources can accomplish.

- Post information about child development and available services in all city and county buildings and cultural and community centers.
- Ensure that elected officials and other high level city and county staff understand and talk about the importance of early childhood in speaking engagements both with community members and with other stakeholders such as business leaders and agency heads. Pass a resolution in local government demonstrating community support for early childhood.
- Host story times in libraries and recreation centers in languages spoken in the community for different age groups with developmentally appropriate books and activities.
- Align messaging across agencies and groups to reduce confusion and conflicting messages.
- Assess how families are acquiring and viewing information. Optimize online materials for viewing on smartphones.

- Host co-created community events, such as a parent night at public housing complexes or a public recreation center, with a focus on child and family well-being. Consider including a “parents and caregivers only” portion where they might learn about brain development and family portions where caregivers can try out activities with their children that promote development and well-being. Working with families to co-create these events will make them more successful. Tip: Providing food and child care goes a long way in allowing families to participate.
- Host “film nights” with documentaries and films related to early childhood to spark conversation.
- Host ongoing trainings for providers from a variety of fields to help them learn about child development, new strategies for encouraging healthy development and how to engage with parents and families, including recognizing parents’ expertise about their own children, families and communities.
- Invite faith-based communities to consider what they can do to support families in promoting healthy child development, including hosting the types of events described here.

- Promote brain-building moments throughout the community with multi-platform tools such as Vroom and Talk Read Sing.
- Consider who you can partner with to disseminate your message (such as local public radio and television stations) and how and when you already touch families with young children (when they pay bills, at the library, in public housing, at local medical clinics). Encourage businesses to think about how they can post materials in their offices both for employees and customers. For instance, grocery stores can post brain development information or activities on their shopping carts.
- Partner with parent leaders to develop an advocacy campaign that shows the importance of investing in early childhood and how the investment benefits everyone in the community.
- Reach out to “unusual suspects” or groups that have influence such as seniors, the business community or civic organizations.
- Use a “Children in All Policies“ or “Children First” approach to promote awareness of how all policies affect children and to endorse the commitment the community has made to children and their well-being.

HOW HAS YOUR COMMUNITY DEMONSTRATED PROGRESS TOWARD THIS LEVEL?
WHAT ACTIONS DO YOU INTEND TO TAKE TO REACH THIS LEVEL?

- Conduct a needs assessment and landscape analysis at the neighborhood and district level.
- Ask community and cultural organizations with strong ties to the community for their insight into opportunities, gaps and barriers for families to build their social connections.
- Invite parents and caregivers to give their input on needs and opportunities to reduce social isolation through surveys, focus groups or going to door to door.
- Create a community map of safe places where families can and do gather.
- If there are places where families could gather but don’t – such as an unused playground in a neighborhood park – engage residents to find out what is keeping them from going there and what could be done to get families to start using that space.

- Create online and hard copy versions of the directory and ensure that they are updated at least once a year by giving listed organizations and providers an opportunity to edit their contact information and services offered.
- Visit early care and education centers to show providers and families how to use the directory.
- Encourage the local information and referral providers to invest in an easy-to-use mobile interface for their online service directory.
- Host trainings for partners such as health care providers, clergy members and business owners on how to use the directory and make referrals.
- Address practices and policies that stigmatize families who seek support. Ask families about sources of stigma and their experiences with different service providers. Incorporate a way for parents and caregivers to rate and/or review the services and resources listed in the directory.
- Promote implementation of this approach by training support staff who interact with families, such as bus drivers and front desk staff.
- When possible, streamline application processes for services, using just one application for the different services a family might need.
- Encourage parents and other family members to become ambassadors in spreading the word about these services, compensating them for their time and expertise.
- Consider co-locating several social services into one location where families can access the resources they need to be successful. This one-stop shop can promote efficiency, leverage resources and support families.

| § Map the availability of core services (pediatric and family practice clinics, early care and education programs and family support programs such as home visiting providers and family resource centers) in neighborhoods throughout the city alongside numbers of young children in each neighborhood and public transportation options linking neighborhoods to those where more services are available. Include demographic data, like income, race and ethnicity to help identify disparities in enrollment and usage and gaps in access.
§ Identify tools that service providers can use to assess the level of quality appropriate to a variety of settings to stimulate conversations about quality improvement. Consider elements such as curriculum, professional development, planning time, pay and developmentally appropriate practices.
§ Come to an agreement on shared language and common outcomes for children and families across child- and family-serving systems. Explore potential frameworks to capture the outcomes all relevant systems can embrace and connect their work to, and adopt the language of that framework across systems.
§ Leverage assessments and surveys already conducted within or around your community. For example, many Head Start grantees and hospitals already do community assessments. Check with these entities to see if they have recent results.
§ Survey or conduct listening sessions with parents of young children to learn about their needs, how they currently access services, what needs remain unmet and what would make accessing services easier for them. Take care to hear from parents in underserved neighborhoods and marginalized populations. Ensure that parents who can’t attend a scheduled event have other opportunities to join the conversation such as through Facebook Live or Twitter chats and online surveys.
§ Conduct listening sessions with early care and education providers to determine their needs for additional support for themselves or for the families they serve. As with parents, offer multiple avenues for providers to engage in these conversations.

- Establish incentives for service providers (e.g., early care and education, mental health providers or anything else identified in gap analyses) to locate in areas of greater need or to better reach marginalized families, including supporting existing service providers to expand into additional neighborhoods or expand hours of operation to meet families' needs.
- Establish a cross-sector collaboration of providers in early care and education, health, social services and basic services in areas of most need, so providers may determine standards of quality and align services. Provide incentives or support for deeper collaboration, including cross-referral (with tracking for completion), data sharing and tracking of shared output and outcome measures.

- Encourage co-location of programs and services to expand the range of services available in underserved neighborhoods.
- Promote the importance of “medical homes” for young children, both by educating parents about the benefits of finding a consistent provider for their children, and by supporting health care providers to provide comprehensive services for the children and families they serve.
- Implement a unified application and/or waitlist for early care and education programs so that parents only have to complete one application and get the first available spot that meets their needs.
- Support early care and education providers in providing professional development to staff. Host citywide trainings for teachers and joint trainings for pre-k and kindergarten teachers. Consider how trainings can be accessible to in-home providers and centers without staff to cover classrooms during the day.
- Implement high-quality preschool in a way that reaches underserved families and addresses gaps in school readiness.
- Measure parent and caregiver satisfaction with various programs or agencies. Improving “customer satisfaction” is an important step toward assessing and improving both access and quality.

- Invest in the development of an easily accessible service hub, anchored around a public entity such as a library with low-cost rental space available for other services such as a health clinic, child care center, legal aid office or family resource center.
- Develop transportation solutions to help community residents access services located outside of their own neighborhoods. For example, consider using online messaging programs to help small cohorts of families develop plans for ridesharing to early learning centers or libraries.

TARGET
All children receive routine screening, identification, referral and linkage for risks and needs.

HOW HAS YOUR COMMUNITY DEMONSTRATED PROGRESS TOWARD THIS LEVEL? WHAT ACTIONS DO YOU INTEND TO TAKE TO REACH THIS LEVEL?

- Survey providers to find out how many, how regularly and where developmental screenings are being conducted to determine which children in the community are less likely to be screened.
- Ensure that health care professionals, child care providers and home visitors have access to screening tools and are trained on how to administer them and communicate the results to parents and caregivers in a culturally responsive manner.
- Provide a directory of community resources, accessible to anyone who is administering screenings, to help guide referrals when needed.
- Identify and engage Child Find and early intervention agencies to assess current services and provide outreach to families.
- Assess whether stigma is a barrier for some families to accept or seek out screening, and work to reduce that stigma by communicating that screening is for everyone, that screening results will only be used to refer a child or family for additional support and that early intervention can reduce the need for other services later on.

HOW HAS YOUR COMMUNITY DEMONSTRATED PROGRESS TOWARD THIS LEVEL? WHAT ACTIONS DO YOU INTEND TO TAKE TO REACH THIS LEVEL?

- Hire and train community liaisons to bring screenings to families who do not participate in formal child care or home visiting programs.
- Make a variety of culturally responsive screening tools available for parents and informal care providers (family, friend and neighbor care providers) to check out from the library along with instructions for use and a directory of community resources for following up on identified concerns.
- Educate parents about the importance of developmental screening (and their availability for children covered by Medicaid) and encourage them to seek it out through their pediatrician or other provider.

- Implement a citywide, countywide or regional phone number or website for referrals for use by providers, parents or anyone administering developmental screenings.
- Track the number and types of referrals coming from different population groups and neighborhoods within the community, and use that data to focus services and/or outreach on populations identified as underserved. Track the proportion of referrals completed and the length of time to completion.
- Have a cross-sector early childhood collaborative group monitor results for quality improvement of services and review of community needs.

- Assess the extent to which families are currently able to access early intervention services. Are those services available to everyone who needs them? Are families of color able to access services equally? Are services provided in a way that meets families’ needs? Are efforts underway to reduce the stigma of accessing services? Partner with local IDEA Part C early intervention agencies, which should have access to these types of data.

- Encourage collaboration between early intervention providers and child care providers so that children of working parents can receive therapeutic interventions and other needed services in the setting where they spend their days, when appropriate.

- Hold listening sessions or meet one-on-one with system-involved families, or those identified as in need of services, to find out what they want for their families and what supports they need to achieve their goals.

- Ensure that community navigators (or promotoras) are available to conduct outreach, organize activities in select communities and assist families in accessing needed services – in paid positions if possible.

- Hire parent mentors who have past involvement with the child welfare system to help parents with open cases navigate the system, understand the changes they need to make and access resources.

- Translate communication materials into all languages spoken in the community and have interpreters available during events. To broaden your reach, consider using digital outreach as well.

- Braid funding streams and services together to meet identified needs of the whole family, not just the child. For example, make it possible for a family support specialist at a family resource center to serve as a resource and referral specialist to help families find quality child care rather than handing them off to another entity for that support.

- Fund providers to use Family Team Meetings or other family-centric approaches bringing family members, service providers and other key support people in the family’s life together to work and plan how best to meet a family’s needs.

- Empower caseworkers from any system to serve as an advocate and central point of contact for families, including accessing services from other systems and/or for other family members once a relationship is established.

- Establish a protocol for warm handoffs from one system to another, for example from a caseworker to a home visitor, so that a trusted provider helps a family access additional services or transition to the next appropriate service when a case is closed.

ADD TO ACTION PLAN

- Explore potential frameworks to capture the outcomes all relevant systems can embrace and connect their work to, and adopt the language of that framework across systems.
- Identify what data is available, whether it is of high quality (including whether it is disaggregated by race, income and other relevant demographic characteristics) and what major gaps in data exist.
- Develop a data agenda outlining the data you would like to have and who you would need to work with to obtain it.
- Determine what data can be used to track progress and evaluate community needs, including data from non-early childhood focused sources, such as the US Census, the health system or criminal justice.
- Engage parents and other community residents in the process of arriving at shared language and common outcomes, and enlist their help in determining how to communicate that information to the community.
- Provide a template for Memoranda of Understanding to articulate data sharing agreements among agencies and across systems.
- Compile data from across systems and programs to identify disparate outcomes among particular neighborhoods, racial groups, income levels or other population groups, and adjust strategies accordingly.
- Formalize the adoption of a shared outcomes framework by having programs and agencies publicly sign on to it and identify how their work helps children and families meet the identified goals.
- Consider adopting a universal intake form for child- and family-serving programs and services to facilitate cross-referral and sharing of data and tracking of shared outcomes along with outputs.
- Share outcomes and data with the community in an accessible, easy-to-understand format.
- Implement a unique identifier, assigned to each child and used across systems to facilitate data sharing and tracking.
- Plan and carry out quality improvement efforts across systems with a focus on a particular outcome or indicator, including a focus on closing disparities among demographic groups.
- Develop a shared database for child and family service providers to contribute to and access, facilitating better cross-system coordination when families are involved with multiple systems.
- Engage community residents in analyzing and interpreting data and developing strategies to reach shared goals.

  - Hold community listening sessions to learn about families' needs in a variety of neighborhoods in your community, including concerns they may have about the safety of parks, access to transportation and other components of the built environment.
  - Use asset mapping to identify neighborhoods where families may have a harder time meeting their basic needs because their neighborhood is underserved by public services (like transportation, affordable housing and parks) and/or disproportionately exposed to hazards (like water and air pollution, lead contamination, violence and traffic that endangers pedestrians and discourages walkability).
  - Promote collaboration across sectors (including health and dental care, housing, public safety, violence prevention and transit) to identify hazards to children and families, and to understand potential linkages to better meet families' needs.
  - Work with farmers markets and vendors to bring fresh produce to communities that lack grocery stores and/or to ensure that Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP, formerly known as food stamps) benefits are accepted at markets.

  - Assist service providers in implementing trauma-informed policies and practices to improve the accessibility of basic services and well-being.
  - Strengthen building code enforcement and housing inspection efforts to proactively address health issues rather than relying on tenant complaints for reporting. Leverage existing city inspection processes by including lead paint hazard inspections or consider how to engage healthcare providers to help identify when patients may be living in unsafe housing conditions.

The built environment promotes safety and allows families to access basic services in their neighborhoods and beyond.

LEVEL 3
Regardless of neighborhood, families have access to basic services and feel safe in the community, and residents are regularly consulted by policymakers to ensure their needs and priorities continue to be met.

☐ Align policies and strategic plans across sectors to promote safe, healthy environments for children and families, particularly those who are currently underserved by public services and facilities, possibly by using a “health in all policies” approach.

☐ Require that public services be trauma-informed and ensure that public spaces are inviting and accessible for all children and families.

☐ Engage city, county and system leaders in an exercise to assess what a family living in an underserved area would need to do in order to obtain health and dental care, buy healthy food, get their child to quality early care and education or travel to work in various parts of the city. Try to understand the burden that families and individuals face just by virtue of where they live.

☐ Map and analyze how resources flow into neighborhoods. If there are disparities try to ascertain the root causes.

☐ Ensure that service providers are consistently trained on how to best serve communities facing multiple barriers to opportunity, including immigrant and refugee families, families that include LGBTQ individuals, non-English speakers, families involved in the child welfare system and others.

☐ Formalize the authentic engagement of parents and caregivers who are representative of the community in planning and zoning decisions, in the design and planning of public services like transportation and in community health strategies.

HOW HAS YOUR COMMUNITY DEMONSTRATED PROGRESS TOWARD THIS LEVEL?

WHAT ACTIONS DO YOU INTEND TO TAKE TO REACH THIS LEVEL?

- Use asset mapping to identify neighborhoods where economic investment is needed and areas of concentrated disadvantage (i.e., food deserts, areas of concentrated unemployment, areas with high levels of unbanked households, areas with reduced access to affordable high-quality early care and education).
- Assess the availability and quality of workforce development resources, and analyze how workforce development policies and programs can be adapted to better suit the local job market and better prepare residents (particularly parents and caregivers) to succeed.
- Collect and analyze data on participation in income support programs within neighborhoods, such as the Earned Income Tax Credit, and explore local options to increase participation.
- Direct public investment toward underinvested neighborhoods to improve access to education and job training, and improve availability of stable jobs with living wages for local families.
- Work directly with residents to determine what barriers they face to employment and economic mobility, and design solutions accordingly.
- Reduce barriers to employment for parents and caregivers by improving access to high-quality, affordable child care and strengthening public transportation systems.
- Partner with workforce development agencies, businesses and education and training institutions to develop career pathways for high needs jobs in the region, including retraining for people who are currently unemployed and underemployed.
- Apply a two-generation approach to workforce development programs by aligning workforce development policies with policies governing child care subsidies to remove barriers for caregivers seeking further education or training.
- Adopt a living wage that allows families to provide for their children, and index it to inflation to reduce income inequality.
- Incentivize private investment in underinvested communities through tax incentives and subsidies to businesses that will provide needed services, stable employment and critical benefits like paid family, medical and sick leave to local families.

- Use tools like surveys and community listening sessions, to learn about families’ needs in your community and their experiences accessing child and family services, including child care supports. Multiple formats to gather feedback and information should be used to reach a diversity of families.
- Fully integrate parents and caregivers and child-serving providers into all relevant committees, task forces and workgroups where policy strategies that impact young children and their families are considered. Include stakeholders from different racial and ethnic groups – especially those most likely to be affected or those you are most interested in reaching – in the development of new policies and programs. Determine who is missing and how they can be engaged.
- Explore how the community can use local discretion in the administration of state and federal resources to best meet the needs of young children and their families, including through the use of waivers and in the alignment of programs that serve overlapping populations.
- Continuously train child care subsidy intake workers, family service workers and other staff who work directly with families on cultural and linguistic responsiveness, strengths-based family goal-setting and on how to work across service systems to meet families’ full spectrum of needs.
- Track and examine data on access and quality of services by race, ethnicity and other demographic characteristics to inform equitable policies and resource use.

- Implement policy and administrative innovations that improve continuity of access to services. For example, communities may be able to use local funds to cover lapses in child care subsidy eligibility to promote stability for children, working parents and child care providers.
- Implement continuous improvement and feedback loops that include families and service providers to determine what is and isn’t working well for children and families.
- Examine local zoning policies to determine their impact on early care and education centers and adjust city zoning practices to support early care and education providers as business owners.
- Establish a linkage and referral system that seamlessly connects families to existing services in the community at the appropriate time. Memoranda of Understanding can be used between agencies and organizations to ensure services are provided seamlessly with a “no wrong door” approach.

Policies that govern child and family services are equitable and responsive to families.

LEVEL 3

Policies are aligned across systems and are responsive to the diverse and changing needs of families.

- Create a municipal-level office that is charged with promoting the well-being of families with young children, such as an Office of Early Childhood or a Children's Cabinet.
- Coordinate business processes and data collection strategies across service systems to facilitate data sharing.
- Streamline application and eligibility processes through common applications and data sharing, whenever possible. When possible, notification about eligibility for services such as child care subsidies should be offered proactively to eligible families based on cross-system data-sharing rather than requiring eligible families to navigate complicated application processes to determine their eligibility.
- Use cross-sector data analysis to identify areas of need, design policy strategies to address those needs and evaluate outcomes in a system that is aligned and responsive to families.
- Use a racial equity toolkit to assess policies, initiatives and programs. It should help you answer the following questions: “How will this increase or decrease equity? What are the potential unintended consequences? What benefits may result? Do children, families, early educators and providers of color have access, and if not, why?”

LEVEL 1

There is an understanding that land use and development affect children and families, including a recognition that such policies have resulted in underinvestment in some neighborhoods.

--- HAS THE COMMUNITY REACHED THIS LEVEL? ----

- Examine how public investments in community development projects are currently allocated across the community, whether residents’ priorities are addressed by those investments and how land use policies impact different neighborhoods.
- Use surveys, listening sessions at public spaces frequented by families and other tools to learn about families’ needs and desires for the community and obstacles they face to accessing safe, affordable housing, public transportation, nutritious and affordable foods, health and dental care and other community resources.
- Use asset mapping to better understand how access to community resources, community safety and environmental conditions – like affordable housing, public transportation, food, affordable high-quality early care and education, safe pedestrian corridors, safe and accessible public spaces and health care – varies among neighborhoods leading to conditions where some children and families are disconnected from resources and opportunities that are available to those in other neighborhoods.
- Consider how changes to zoning and building codes can encourage developers to consider the well-being of children and families.

- Other:

LEVEL 2

Cross-sector efforts ensure the needs of young children and their families are met in every aspect of community design, including housing, transportation, food, health and dental care and other important systems that serve families.

- Create multi-sector coalitions (that include families) that can help inform more effective and equitable policy development and implementation.
- Consider how public spaces and buildings can be used to co-locate services from different systems that serve overlapping populations, and identify existing policies and regulations that pose barriers to co-located services.
- Designate city or county staff with early childhood expertise to advise decision-makers in public and private systems about how their decisions will impact young children and their families.
- Gauge the success of efforts to make policies more supportive and responsive to families by tracking community listening sessions, monitoring the number of proposals that were driven by resident-identified needs or asking residents to assess the degree to which residents’ and parents’ voices are actively and authentically integrated into policy development and implementation.

- Other:

LEVEL 3

A formalized process is in place to take into account the impact on children and families of all land use and community development policies.

--- HAS THE COMMUNITY REACHED THIS LEVEL? ----

- Formalize the consistent use of child or family impact statements in all land use and community development policies.
- Ensure that child impact statements and other formal tools also consider disparate outcomes based on race, ethnicity, immigration status, income and other demographic characteristics. For example, if high-quality affordable child care facilities are concentrated in one area of the city, who is disproportionately harmed?
- Require review of land use and community development plans by city or county staff with early childhood expertise, and include the voice of families in the planning process.
